UK Outlook for Monday 22 Nov 2021 to Monday 6 Dec 2021:
Settled conditions with high pressure most likely through the period. Conditions are likely to be less windy than the previous period overall, with stormy conditions much less likely than normal. North and northwestern areas may experience some unsettled conditions as low pressure systems affect these parts. Frost and fog become increasingly likely, with temperatures slightly colder than average initially with a chance of wintry conditions over northern hills. Overall remaining drier than average throughout this period, with temperatures generally near average later in the period.
